

Mink Coats

It is currently 10 a.m. in New York City, and what a great idea to start the day walking through the streets with my girlfriends and spending our cheating husband's money! As we strutted through the streets, a woman stopped one of my girlfriends and asked where she got her mink coat because it happened that we were all wearing mink coats since it was freezing outside. As my friend finished chatting up with the kind lady, we happened to run into a clothing shop that me and my girlfriends hadn't seen before.

As we enter, I see a familiar face. It was my husband's mistress shopping at this boutique and seeing that she was wearing the same mink coat as I was! How can my husband do this to me?

But then I remembered that my husband purchased two mink coats, and my husband's mistress has always been jealous of me and has to get everything that I have, but that ends today.

My girlfriend gave me the idea to embarrass her. And I got to thinking this is my chance to get her back for getting with husbands and asking for the same mink coat as I. This is my chance to embarrass her, and has she been done paying? I tripped her on her way out. "Oops, you should be more careful next time," I explained. She gets up, storms out of the boutique, and as I catch up to her, I push her into traffic and get hit by a car. Since the city was very busy this morning, no one saw who pushed her. I returned to spending my husband's money and shopping with my girlfriends. What a great way to start my morning!